Annie and Oakley

Annie & Patrick now in Wisconsin

Patrick Young (the badass beekeeper in Aimee Sue Miki's The Badass Chronicles of the Beekeeper's Eccentric Wife) tells how he acquired Annie. He'd seen the small Chihuahua mix hanging around the place in Texas where he overwinters and transports his bees to pollinate the citrus and almond groves in the south. She didn't have a collar or tags. Patrick put a dish of food out for her, but she wouldn't approach it while he was around. Once he was out of sight, she came and gobbled down the food. He put out a second dish of food the next day, and then, a third. He continued this, each time putting the food closer to the house. She started eating the food while Patrick was in sight, and he started calling her TexAnn. When it got cold outside, she started scratching to get inside, letting Patrick know that she had once been a house dog. Then Patrick realized he would only be in Texas for another month before returning to his home and family in Wisconsin. He would have to take TexAnn to a shelter or bring her home with him. Shelters in Texas are few and have high kill rates. And since she is seen here with the Mikl-Young doodle, Oakley, and is now called Annie (the Tex has been dropped since she no longer lives in Texas), you can guess his decision. The badass beekeeper is really a softie at heart.

I will be joining Aimee Sue Mikl (the author of The Badass Chronicles of the Beekeeper's Eccentric Wife) and her gang from 3 to 7 pm at Sunny's Clear Lake Resort and Bar in New Auburn, WI (N207 Park Lane) where I will be selling and signing the Robin Kould and Mary Yen Rescue books (BOMBO, POPPY, and BRUISER). There will be flower arrangements (a la carte & pre-bundled) and personalized screen printed swags to buy as well. So come have a drink, meet Aimee Sue's girls (and who knows, maybe even Patrick Young, the badass beekeeper himself), see their resort, and buy some books, flowers and swags.
